

New Tribe/Monkey Beaver™ Arborist Saddle

A tree care professional climbs like a monkey and cuts wood like a beaver. Arborist August Hunicke, who has a natural aptitude for supremely skilled, dangerous work up in the treetops, puts it like this for his Monkey Beaver brand: →

August and colleague Joe Boyd pooled their ideas with New Tribe's designer Casey Jones to create the sensational new Monkey Beaver arborist saddle. We are proud to label this saddle with distinctive patches on the leg pads: August's Monkey Beaver "Dude" and a new take on the New Tribe logo.

August is just kidding. He doesn't sew.

If, like August and Joe, you were Made for This™ then our new saddle was Made for YOU.

- Firm, wide waistbelt is contoured from 8" at rear to 3" at front for sturdy, fitted support
- Rope bridge attaches to rigging plates with stopper knots, easy to exchange the bridge
- Forged aluminum bridge ring glides smoothly for every maneuver
- Waistbelt and leg loops equipped with buckles for quick and easy opening and closing without the need to readjust them
- Leg loops are expanded with lightweight fabric and webbing that distributes weight for comfort without bulk, and thigh straps keep them in place
- Optional foam pads can be added for even more leg comfort
- Leg loop buckles adjust for ideal weight distribution between the waistbelt and the leg loops
- Rear buckles on leg loops can be adjusted for perfect positioning

Samurai Joe Boyd on the job

On the waistbelt:

- Forged steel side Ds for life-safety use
- Three slots for tool holders like Rock Exotica transPorter or Petzl Caritoool or carabiner
- Two large aluminum D rings for tool attachment
- One rolled aluminum ring on chainsaw tether
- One structured webbing gear loop at rear
- Two snap hooks
- Four rings for attaching optional suspenders
